

DESIGNER PROJECT

SCOTT SANDERS

Designing this new home for a family in New Vernon, NJ, interior designer Scott Sanders was drawn to durable fabrics in modern prints and cheerful, calming palettes. The goal was a look that was comfortable and timeless. Throughout the home, a sophisticated palette of blue and silver with warm taupe and dark wood tones unify the rooms. By mixing antiques with clean lined traditional furnishings, Sanders created rooms that respect the classic beauty of the home's interior architecture, while still being comfortable for this young family.

One of the standouts and the most fun to create, said Sanders, was a room above the garage called the “man room.” The space, designed with wood paneled walls, navy felt upholstery and nailhead trim, has a clubby feel and features several seating groups for activities like card-playing, TV watching and cocktails. While aesthetically a departure for the home, this room is beloved by the entire family.

Sanders' careful placement of modern fabrics and accessories, as well as saturated color, blend with the furniture, creating a look that is timeless. Brunschwig & Fils, Kravet and Lee Jofa fabrics are central in the schemes that result in a look that is sophisticated, yet approachable.
