AT HOME WITH HISTORY The New-York Historical Society, the city's oldest museum and research library, shakes off its stuffy Central Park West façade this fall to unveil the dramatic results of a three-year overhaul. Everything from the gallery space (lighter and brighter) and public programming (interactive) to a new restaurant (by Stephen Starr, of Buddakan and Morimoto fame) and store (on 77th Street and online) is new and improved. nyhistory.org; nyhistorystore.com

→ TWO STEPS AHEAD

Behind every great brand and rising star is a fiery promoter, doing “whatever it takes.” In mid-century New York, fashion publicist Eleanor Lambert (shown here c. 1966, in signature hat and pearls) was the woman to know. Find out why in Eleanor Lambert: Still Here (Pointed Leaf Press), by John A. Tiffany. pointedleafpress.com

← UNFORGETTABLE DESIGN

From authentic versions of breakthrough furnishings for the modern home—like the iconic 1953 Eames Hang-It-All Coat Rack (above) and Philippe Starck’s transformative Louis XV-inspired sidechairs (2005)—to playful pieces, such as Eve Chang’s 2006 Elephant Bookend and Willem de Kooning magnets, every product sold in the MoMA Design Store has been curator-reviewed and -approved. momastore.com
